

The seismic information in the variety of underground water level

Li Yong

Department of Mathematics,
Beijing Normal University, Beijing 100875, PRC
liyong@bnu.edu.cn

ABSTRACT

This article mainly discussed the relationship between the change of underground-water-level and seismic activity in here. Based on the idea of time series and regression, we present a method to describe the relationship of the underground water level and the seismic information. By means the relationship, we discussed the method to recover earthquake activity information from the variance of underground water level.